Additionally, the shareholders of a close corporation must unanimously adopt a shareholders agreement. The shareholders agreement must contain a detailed scheme by which the shareholders, rather than the board of directors, will manage the affairs of the corporation. This is typically a very detailed, highly customized agreement.

Statutory Close Corporation. A Statutory Close Corporation may operate without a Board of Directors and without annual meetings. There are also other normal corporate requirements which do not have to be met. The law does provide for restrictive "default" positions on many issues, such as who may purchase stock from an existing stockholder. Quasi-
