Scarlett Johansson is the bait. In oh so many ways. In Under the Skin's deliberately opaque and expressionistically filmed storyline (loosely based on Michel Faber's 2000 novel) the actress plays an alien who dons a human persona. In black wig and blood-red lipstick this pretty cosmic spinner lures unsuspecting men on the streets of Glasgow.

When the main character lures men back to her house, the men strip down and follow the woman in a completely black room; as they walk towards her, they then sink into a clear oil-like substance where they are floating submerged. One man witnesses another suddenly "deflate" like a burst balloon leaving only the man's skin surface floating.
